

Summary

Las Vegas Police say they're close to finding the third member of a trio authorities believe robbed a casino, then left a trail of evidence. Police say a man in a disguise and wielding a gun, walked up to a table at the Rio Hotel and Casino Thursday morning, demanding money. Investigators say the crooks walked away with about 33-thousand dollars in casino chips. But that's when things started to fall apart. Drew Karedes has the story.
