

Elizabeth Crum at NRO's Battle '10 has internal e-mails from Harrah's, a major casino chain in Nevada, showing that management has been pressuring its employees to vote for Harry Reid in the Senate race. The e-mails show that supervisors had to account for their staff turnout in early voting, demanding updates and explanations for non-performance. A staffer on the Reid campaign offered to coordinate with the culinary union to provide buses to push employees to the polls:

Executives at the casino giant Harrah's pushed company employees to vote early in an all-out effort to help the Harry Reid campaign, according to internal emails obtained by Battle '10.

The stepped-up effort began Wednesday when a Reid staffer sent an email pleading for help to Harrah's top lobbyist, Jan Jones. Soon after, Marybel Batjer, Harrah's vice president of public policy and communications, distributed that plea via email to executives throughout the company.

Powered by WizardRSS | Full Text RSS Feeds

Source: http://news.google.com/news/url?sa=t&fd=R&usg=AFQjCNHgWjfg_kre7tbwkdUG2G8iQ0m3DA&url=http://nation.foxnews.com/harry-reid/2010/11/02/hot-air-did-harrahs-casino-pressure-employees-vote-reid