

Kevin Spacey told THR he was proud to be nominated for Casino Jack, his first leading role "in some time."

The actor said he was "proud and moved" about his sixth Golden Globe nom for his performance as lobbyist Jack Abramoff and noted that he's "really broken up and sad" that late director George

Hickenlooper wasn't around to enjoy it.

"I know nothing would make him happier than a nomination and getting people to go out and see it," Spacey said.
