

It looks as if Philadelphia won't get a second casino anytime soon.

Pennsylvania gambling regulators on Thursday revoked the license for a long-stalled casino project along the Delaware River.

The project's backers and partner Caesars Entertainment had worked for weeks to assemble new financing, ownership and design plans.

Investors first won a license four years ago, but the project stalled amid local opposition and the recession.

Philadelphia this year became the largest U.S. city with a gambling hall when the SugarHouse casino opened.

Copyright 2010 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed.

Powered by WizardRSS | Work At Home Jobs

Source: http://news.google.com/news/url?sa=t&fd=R&usg=AFQjCNE3zjhcYL4BT_ZB3sccrXVEqshc3g&url=http://abcnews.go.com/Business/wireStory?id=12413162